Next Steps:

Upon receipt of this completed form, the Registrar's Office will set up and provide CIA student accounts to help you prepare for the semester. You will also be connected with the CIA Academic Advising team to discuss your course scheduling. You can view a complete listing of undergraduate courses in the CIA catalog. The catalog lists both spring and fall courses; however, not all catalog courses are offered every semester. The Fall 2026 courses are posted in the myCIA Course Search. Make sure you are in the correct term when searching for courses. From the undergraduate program, a maximum of four courses (12 credits) per semester, for a total of twenty-four (24) credits over two consecutive semesters, are included in the scholarship. Please be aware of the meeting times for credit-bearing courses, as most meet once per week for about five hours total, with a scheduled break. Please also note that all new students are automatically registered for a zero-credit, pass/fail Safety Lab course during their first semester at CIA, as it is required for all students who are new to the institution.

If you would like to start in the summer or cannot take degree-credit courses during the week in the fall or spring, see the listing of Continuing Education and Community Outreach (CECO) courses at their official webpage. Let the advisor who contacts you know if you choose to take CECO courses, and they will direct you to the registration process for this option. You cannot take a combination of CECO and credit-bearing courses within the same term. Please note: You may take CECO courses in one semester and undergraduate-level courses in the other, but the scholarship will not cover a combination of the two within the same term.
